Thousands Attend Opening of Tryon Horse Park

The newest, biggest and most ambitious horse facility in the country is within easy reach of South Carolina riders. In fact, one of the managing partners of the Tryon International Equestrian Center, Mark Bellissimo, lives in Spartanburg.

Bellissimo and his wife Catherine welcomed N.C. Governor Pat McCrory, along with a host of local officials and celebrities, to the center's grand opening on June 6. Country singer Lee Greenwood performed several of his hits for the crowd of 10,000 people who came to watch a world-class Grand Prix with prize money of $210,000.

The competitors--who came from all over the country and beyond--raved about the arenas, the footing, and the care that went into designing the facility. With 10 arenas, 850 stalls, permanent vendor cabins, several restaurants on site, and even a complete fitness center, the Tryon center exceeded everyone's expectations.

In his opening remarks, Bellissimo said he and his partners originally planned to invest $20 to $30 million to bring the unique resort to reality. Having already spent more than $70 million--and created 700 jobs in the process--he expects their total investment to top $100 million.

And all this for horses? Absolutely! Tryon has long been a horse community, with roots going back more than a century. Upstate South Carolina, just across the border, is minutes away from the Mill Spring, N.C. facility.

"We have a vision to increase the hospitality infrastructure," Bellissimo said. The impact of a similar site in Wellington, Fla., which he also owns, generates $200 million a year.

The Grand Prix course at the new Tryon center in Mill Spring, N.C. attracted international riders, who competed for $210,000 in prize money at the opening event.

"This will help the entire Carolinas region," Gov. McCrory said. "It will spur new hotels and entertainment. We will see more investors and a spinoff industry." All the surrounding counties, including Spartanburg and Greenville, supported the project.

Charlie Jayne of Chicago, a sixth-generation horseman who has competed all over the world, called the new center "the most horse-friendly facility I've been to. The footing is probably the best in world. They took the good parts from Wellington and added to it. Boom! Here it is."

When asked how many world-class riders would make their way to Tryon, Jayne replied, "Build it and they will come. The classes will get bigger, and five-star status will come."

In fact, after a breath-holding jump-off that had the eight clear rounds competing for top prize money, Richie Maloney of Ireland pulled off the win. His head-long gallop for the last fence had the crowd cheering wildly as his horse, Carrabis Z, cleared the massive jump with a final time of 36.9 seconds.

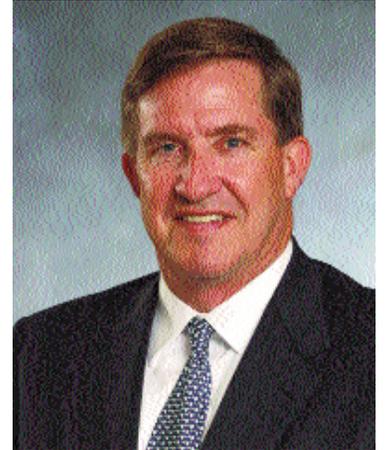

"This is a huge regional economic impact, and it's important to all of us," Gov. McCrory said of the international venue. "This could have been anywhere in the United States. We salute Mark for his vision."

Future plans call for an 18-hole golf course, a luxury hotel and clubhouse, and additional houses on site. To put the icing on the cake, Tryon International Equestrian Center has been selected as one of the host sites of the US American Eventing Championships in 2016.

Meeting with a Purpose

It's always a good opportunity to interact with other states in the fascinating and ever-changing world of agriculture. Recently, I attended the 2015 Southern Association of State Departments of Agriculture (SASDA) annual meeting in Atlanta. This yearly event gives me a chance to interact with agriculture commissioners and staff from neighboring states. We always have a lot of information to exchange. It's also a time to welcome new faces.

The more our agriculture agencies learn from each other, the more we can continue to improve. During the SASDA conference, we were each invited to share some of the most significant accomplishments of our respective agencies over the last year. Virginia Commissioner Sandy Adams enlightened us on her state's agriculture and forestry development fund, and Arkansas Commissioner Wes Ward shared his personal connection from his Marine Corp career to Homegrown by Heroes, along with ways that his department has partnered with this campaign.

We learned about the Made in Oklahoma brand, similar to Certified South Carolina. Their state has a unique coalition of companies that promote brand awareness and consumer loyalty for their home-grown food and ag products.

Watermelon Field Day July 9

A Watermelon Field Day will be held at the Edisto Research and Education Center in Blackville on July 9. Registration will be at 8 a.m. at the office complex, followed by an indoor session at 8:15 a.m. in the auditorium.

Topics include an overview of watermelon board activities by Matthew Cornwell, a lecture on spraying melons by Dr. Tony Keinath, Tri-Hishtil plant grafting by Bert Lemkes and honey bee biology by Jennifer Tsuruda.

Following the indoor sessions the group will go to the field to look at research projects and variety trials. Certified Crop Advisor and Pesticide License credits will be offered.

The field research tours will include: Bayer Feed A Bee, grafting update, UAV and sensor imaging, and merge and root knot nematodes. The watermelon trial will demonstrate 81 different varieties.

Following the field tour, participants will return to the office complex for cold watermelons, lunch and further discussion.

After lunch the group will return to the field and look inside a bee hive. A limited number of bee suits are available. Those not suited can watch from inside the bus with audio from those leading the tour.

For details and directions call the research center at 803-284-3343 Ext. 221, S.C. Department of Agriculture, Matt Cornwell at 803-734-0467, or your local county agent.

Research Farm Focuses on Rice, Vegetables & Grafting

At one time, rice was South Carolina's premier crop. Plantations all across the Lowcountry were devoted to producing thousands of tons of rice, both for use in this country and as exports. But when the rice culture collapsed in the mid-1800s, the land was abandoned. Rice was simply too labor-intensive to survive as a viable food crop.

Fast forward to 2015, at the Coastal Education and Research Center (REC) field day on June 10 in Charleston. More than 150 visitors got a close look at a large trial plot of rice, as Clemson research specialist Dr. Brian Ward explained how today's methods—along with drip irrigation, improved applications of nitrogen and new varieties—are improving rice culture.

Explaining the System of Rice Intensification, Ward said higher yields are possible with less input of water and fertilizer. Planting dates and the application of nitrogen vary so that researchers can determine how to make rice flourish. One of the hybrids, for example, has shorter foliage so that the wind doesn't blow the stalks over.

He also demonstrated a piece of equipment known as a "flamer," which is used to kill clover and nut sedge between the rows. This modified flame thrower—which is a hand-held wand with a propane torch on the end—eliminates only the grass and weeds that it touches. For larger fields, the flamers can be mounted behind a tractor to kill grass between the rows.

Not only is the Coastal REC testing many varieties of rice, it also has test plots of field corn, sweet corn, tomatoes, and many types of cucurbits, which are members of the melon family. Using different planting dates, for example, affects both productivity and disease-resistance. The center is comparing 35 varieties of sweet corn, including white, yellow, and bi-color.

Center director Dr. Richard Hassell explained some of the latest work being done on grafting. He is studying several lines of native root stock that are hardy and disease-resistant. Grafting has many benefits for producers.

Visitors toured the entire farm, learning about new methods that can make vegetables more profitable. Using data from the test plots, growers can evaluate every aspect of vegetables, from eye appeal to uniformity to color. The center is also doing a trial on varieties of tomatoes which are sold to manufacturers for canning and processing. These tomatoes have less juice and tougher skins than the ones grown for the table.

Results from some of the trials will be shared with The Vegetable Handbook, an invaluable resource for many growers.

Tree Improvement Workshop to Be Held July 25

A field tour and educational program on seedling selection for pine planting in the Piedmont will be held July 25. Included will be a tour of Timberhaven Tree Farm and a program at the National Wild Turkey Federation in Edgefield.

The featured speaker is Dr. Steven E. McKeand, a professor of forestry and director of the Cooperative Tree Improvement Program at N.C. State University.

Topics include tree improvement and forest productivity, genetics, and the loblolly pine Performance Rating System.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. at Timberhaven Tree Farm, 156 Gold Mine Road in Edgefield County. Lunch will be provided after the tours. The cost is $10 for members and inspectors, $30 for non-members, and $40 for foresters for credit.

The deadline to sign up is July 20. To reserve a spot, contact Wallace Wood at 864-333-2393 or 864-993-5012 or wwd@wctel.net; or Walt McPhail at TreeVetSC@aol.com or 864-288-7618.

Mock Nuclear Disaster Will Test Response of S.C. Emergency Teams

In July, South Carolina will be the site of a mock nuclear event, designed to test the response capabilities of emergency and disaster personnel across the state. Since agriculture would be affected by such an event, the S.C. Department of Agriculture plays an important role in the exercise.

In the mock disaster, HB Robinson Plant in Hartsville would be compromised, with a plume of fall-out spreading across the Pee Dee region. Thirteen counties would be considered at risk, with seven of those designated as host counties.

During an emergency training workshop at the State Farmers Market Phillips Center, officials addressed public health, the possible embargo of food products, quarantines for people and animals, the effects of radiation, and possible contamination. Response times and the duties of various agencies were covered. The exercise will serve as a pilot project for other states.

Agricultural data is being put together in the form of an emergency guide for farmers. For information on the exercise, go to emd.sc.gov.

Commissioners from all across the Southern U.S. were treated to a tour of Atlanta during the recent SASDA convention.

Georgia Commissioner Gary Black shared how they are implementing new information technology to provide better customer service. He also told us about their Feed a School for a Week program, which is something we want to look at to complement Farm to School efforts here in South Carolina. Commissioner Miller, a new face from Texas, told us about ... well, everything Texas.

There were also updates from various speakers on honeybee stewardship, weights and measures, land grant research, a rural challenge strategic plan, and economics, to mention a few.

My presentation touched on some strengths of our industry and some of the issues that we are facing in South Carolina. We have a lot to be proud of, like the 23 percent growth in agribusiness in the Palmetto State since 2006, generating $41.7 billion and supporting more than 212,000 jobs. I talked about the success of our Certified South Carolina program, and how South Carolina's export business continues to expand at a rapid pace. I also shared some of our stewardship activities and some of the ways our department is improving and expanding customer services.

As I am the longest serving member of the SASDA group, I shared a perspective on the changes I have witnessed among the group representing the 14 states. All good things.

With poultry as the top commodity in South Carolina, it is especially relevant that we were treated to a behind the scenes tour of Chick-fil-A operations at their corporate office, where we learned about the philosophies behind the business: Chick-fil-A sees itself as a "people" company that serves chicken. They invest in the people (the employees, the owners, and the customers) who helped push 2014 sales to nearly six billion dollars. We were impressed with founder Truett Cathy's philosophy. None of his stores are open on Sunday, so that his employees can attend church and/or spend time at home with their families. We didn't see their star Holstein cows from their commercials.

The poultry focus also included for everyone an update on the bird flu issues in the Midwest. The importance of being prepared and working together was the main emphasis.

Our colleagues in Georgia hosted a great meeting, and they pulled out all the stops for the 14 states that were represented, complete with a laser show at Stone Mountain, delicious Georgia-grown food, and a dinner sponsored by the World of Coca-Cola, with great entertainment by some Georgia FFA'ers.

Our country's Southern states truly have so much to be proud of, and we are grateful to our friends in Georgia who provided us the opportunity to work toward a common goal – strengthening and creating new opportunities for our home-grown agribusiness communities. We look forward to new success stories that we will share at SASDA 2016.

Lexington County Peach Festival Will Be July 4

A full day of fun has been lined up for the Lexington County Peach Festival on July 4th, celebrating America's birthday with peach recipes galore and many other delicious foods, arts and crafts, and children's rides – all centered at Gilbert Community Park on Rikard Circle. A parade, three stages of entertainment, a car show, volleyball tournament, and an antique tractor and farm equipment display will be free of charge to festivalgoers.

Local radio personality Rob Sanders will be reading the Declaration of Independence at noon. The parade begins at 9:30 a.m., and the fireworks show starts at 10 p.m.

Attorney General Alan Wilson Named Grand Marshal of Peach Festival Parade

Alan Wilson

The Lexington County Peach Festival, with a deep-rooted tradition in honoring United States military, has named South Carolina Attorney General Alan Wilson as 2015 Grand Marshal for its 57th annual parade. The July 4th parade will begin at 9:30 a.m. and will include a vintage U.S. Naval N3N biplane.

Paying tribute to the U.S. military is an important part of the peach festival, and weather permitting, the Bell Aviation N3N fly-over will be a significant highlight during the 2015 parade. This 1940 plane was built at the Naval Aircraft factory in Philadelphia, Pa. and was used during World War II for training.

The Honorable Alan Wilson, who is serving his second term as our state's Attorney General, earned the Combat Action Badge while serving in Iraq with the S.C. National Guard. He continues to serve the U.S. military through legal support for soldiers, and focuses on keeping South Carolina a safe place to live, work and raise a family.

Following the parade, the public is invited to hear Attorney General Wilson speak at 11 a.m. at the Gilbert Primary School cafetorium.

The annual Peachy Contest judging will begin at 9 a.m. in the Gilbert Primary School cafetorium. Two categories are part of the contest: salads & main dishes, and desserts. Each "peachy dish" submitted must include at least two cups of fresh peaches. Contestants must submit a neatly written recipe for each dish that is submitted and complete an entry form. First place winners in each category will receive $75, and second place winners will receive $50. Entries are judged on imaginative use of peaches, simplicity and ease of preparation, appearance, and taste.

The Gilbert Community Club has been sponsoring the Lexington County Peach Festival since it started in 1959. For more information about the festival, visit www.lexingtoncountypeachfestival.com.
